

DIA DE LOS MUERTOS

A large, colorful sugar skull (calavera) is the central focus. It has a white base with intricate black and yellow patterns. The eyes are large and black, and the mouth is wide and grinning. The skull is surrounded by a decorative border of small yellow and black dots. Above the skull, the words "DIA DE LOS MUERTOS" are written in a large, blue, stylized font, arched over the skull. The background is dark blue with a textured, rocky appearance.

From the depths of a Tennessee subterranean amphitheater, PBS presents a concert event as vibrant and soulful as the tradition it honors. Día de los Muertos is a high-energy musical celebration, taped live within the awe-inspiring “underworld” of world-renowned music venue, The Caverns (home of the PBS series The Caverns Sessions). This special captures the essence of the much-anticipated and highly celebrated fiesta, lifting up the ancient traditions deeply rooted in people of Mexican heritage everywhere.

The lineup is a powerhouse of Latino greatness, featuring the legendary rock of Los Lobos and the explosive salsa-rap-reggae-funk fusion of Ozomatli, both hailing from Los Angeles. They are joined by the groundbreaking, all-female mariachi band, Flor de Toloache, from New York City. Intermixed with the electrifying performances are insightful vignettes exploring the profound meaning, origins, and cultural importance of this special day and its traditions. Día de los Muertos is more than a concert; it's a vital, eye-catching offering to a beloved celebration.

Día de los Muertos airs Friday, October 31 at 9PM

OYATE WOYAKA

From the sacred heart of the Great Plains comes a story of a people and the soul of their speech. OYATE WOYAKA is a profound journey into the deep spiritual history of the Lakota language, a tongue nearly silenced by a brutal past. Yet, this is not a eulogy, but a testament to resilience. With moving intimacy, the film captures the modern-day warriors—educators, elders, and children—engaged in the urgent, uphill battle to breathe life back into their words, ensuring that the voice of the Oyate, the People, is never lost.

Oyate Woyaka airs Monday, Oct. 13 at 10 PM

THE ALL-STAR ORCHESTRA

all star
ORCHESTRA
GERARD SCHWARZ
MUSIC DIRECTOR & CONDUCTOR

The All-Star Orchestra, now in its second decade, gives you a front row seat to the world's greatest music and the map to an unforgettable musical journey. It began with a commitment to classical music education and contemporary American composers. The series features classical masterpieces and new works from leading contemporary American composers, aiming to expose a broad audience to classical music while keeping the listening experience informative and accessible. In addition to performances of classical and contemporary works, the programs also feature musical excerpts, images, interviews and educational commentary by Maestro Schwarz, the All-Star Orchestra musicians, and special guests.

"What started as a passion project to put together some of the best musicians in the country is now a first-rank orchestra entering its second decade," said Maestro Schwarz. "The repertoire is great, and each player's performance is first-class, but what matters the most is the inspiration that we can provide to viewers across the country through public TV. We hope to show you, no matter your background, age, career, or where you are in your life, something interesting about this music that perhaps you didn't know — something that will grab your attention and inspire you to dig deeper into each piece, or each composer."

The season begins with the ultimate Romantic pairing: a full symphony orchestra with a magnificent organ. French composer Camille Saint-Saëns created his "Organ Symphony" in 1886, and it has thrilled audiences worldwide ever since. The program opens with Mexican composer Carlos Chávez's Sinfonía India, from 1931, featuring authentic melodies of indigenous peoples and native percussion instruments of Aztec heritage.

The All-Star Orchestra airs Mondays at 10PM beginning Oct. 13

VIENNA BLOOD

Step into the opulent and shadowy world of 1900s Vienna, a city of dazzling artistic and scientific advancement simmering with social and political tension. Vienna Blood pairs a most unlikely duo: the tenacious, traditional Detective Inspector Oskar Rheinhardt and the brilliant, young English doctor Max Liebermann, a disciple of Sigmund Freud. As a series of bizarre and disturbing murders confounds the police, Rheinhardt turns to Liebermann for his revolutionary—and often unsettling—knowledge of the human psyche.

Together, they are a formidable partnership, using groundbreaking psychoanalytic techniques and dogged investigation to hunt killers lurking in the city's grand cafes and elegant boulevards. This thrilling journey into the darkest corners of the mind is set against a richly detailed historical backdrop, further complicated by the Liebermann family's experiences as British Jews navigating the prejudices of a society on the brink of monumental change.

Vienna Blood, Season 1, airs Wednesdays, at 8PM beginning Oct. 15

ATOMIC PEOPLE

In August 1945, a new chapter in human history opened with the atomic bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki. The “Little Boy” bomb was 2,000 times more powerful than any previous weapon, instantly killing approximately 80,000 people. Three days later, a second bomb killed 40,000 more instantly, with death tolls rising to well over 100,000 by year’s end.

Now, 80 years later, ATOMIC PEOPLE documents the urgent testimony of the Hibakusha—the survivors. With an average age of 85, they were children when the bombs fell. This film is an invaluable record, combining their devastating personal recollections with archival footage. It is a moving and crucial account from the only people on Earth to have survived a nuclear attack, ensuring their warnings and experiences are not lost to history.

ATOMIC PEOPLE is available on-demand for members on KLCS|Passport

KLCS INTERVIEW SPOTLIGHT

Three years ago, we sat down with the one and only Sara Moulton. Now, the iconic protégé of Julia Child is back with a new season of Sara's Weeknight Meals, and so are we! We caught up with the queen of practical gourmet to get the scoop on her latest culinary adventures, the secret to her enduring charm, and why her new dishes are about to become your weeknight salvation. Trust us, you'll want to read every delicious word.

Sara, what have you been up to since we last spoke? It was three years ago already, can you believe it? That was in 2022 and now it's 2025!

SM: It's amazing about time, particularly as we get older; maybe it's always amazing about time. What have I been up to? Pretty much what I was up to before, which is I'm down to two things - I do my public television show, and our sponsor continues to be the cruise line Oceana. And they've been a wonderful partner, they've been very supportive. So, I continue to work with them and that means travel. This year we did something different - we set up a studio on the ship and shot on the ship.

Oh?!

SM: Yeah, which was great because we got a lot more done than we normally do; it was all in one place. You just walk up a couple flights of stairs, the whole crew, and there you are, you're ready to go! We also did another international cruise, which we've been doing every year since they started with us. I still do my show, and that involves a fair amount of travel and that's a lot of fun. And, I'm still co-host with Christopher Kimball for a small segment of Milk Street's podcast.

This month we are premiering your new season on KLCS; is there anything we should be looking out for in Season 14?

SM: I think what we've been focusing on since this wonderful thing happened, where we ended up with the cruise line as our major sponsor; it's become more international weeknight meals. It's not as much me alone, it's more people with from the places we go, cooking their version of a weeknight meal because everyone eats dinner. I think even more than Americans, Europeans care about eating dinner; they're not doing takeout and prepared foods. We still are, I wish we weren't. But it's really fun for me because I get to learn from other people, and it's a mix of chefs and home cooks making their recipes, but even home cooks you can learn a ton from, particularly if they love it and they've been doing it forever. They've figured out some of their own tips and tricks which I don't know about. I love it because I learn new recipes, it's really a shot in the arm. I'm sort of bored with myself (laughs) on TV. I mean, I have lots of advice for everybody after all these millions of years cooking, but it's more fun to be with somebody new and learn their whole perspective.

Are they chefs we know? And, in what locations were you filming?

SM: In our travels, we were in Barcelona, where we've been a lot recently. And that is more just a couple of field pieces, but some fun pieces, about where to get really good tapas. And my all time favorite tapa, was this little hole in the wall place; they barely had their name on the door. It was just a breakfast and lunch place, not opened for dinner. They had wonderful grilled whole squid and grilled sardines, but my favorite thing was something that's just not unique to them, it's called "the bomba," literally "the bomb." What it is, and it sounds so weird, and it doesn't sound necessarily like it'd be fantastic, but it was fantastic. (And they wouldn't give us the receipt of course.) It's mashed potatoes with some ground meat in it, I think it was pork, but like not a nugget in the middle. I think the mashed potatoes were made with tons of really good olive oil, which is something I've found in the Mediterranean as a theme. Every where we go, it's the really excellent olive oil that puts the dish over the top, oddly enough. So that mashed potatoes was made into a little mound and coated in crumbs and fried, and then it was topped with aioli, but the real Spanish aioli, which was just purely minced garlic and olive oil, period. Nothing else. Emulsified. You will never kiss again, and that's ok. So that was topped with the aioli and then a sprinkling of hot chili powder. I don't know what it was; my whole team loved that. And we also went to a couple other places including one of the oldest stores in Barcelona. So we do some field pieces, but then we shot in Turkey in Istanbul, at this absolutely gorgeous 4-star hotel; it used to be the sultan's palace. The chef and I cooked on a table outside. He made two fish dishes, one was sea bream and salt crust, which was wonderful. One of those hard salt crusts that you have to knock to take the fish out. And the fish does not taste salty; it just tastes delicious. And the other was a layered steam fish. So that was fun!

What has life been like lately? What is your typical day now, versus three years ago?

SM: I did look at that interview and I noticed I was doing watercolors. And I'm still trying to do it. I sort of have a love hate relationship with it, but it's still something I'm trying to do. I don't do it as much as I should or could. I've got to learn how to enjoy it more and stop worrying about it so much (laughs). But the other thing I've taken on since my birthday in February is piano.

Did you play piano before?

SM: I played piano for 10 years when I was in elementary, high school, and then I stopped playing. And I was in the choir at church, I loved signing in the choir, but I got to the point where I didn't think I could read music. And I just thought, let me go back and revisit this. You can get a keyboard, it's not like getting a real piano. So, I did, and I've really been enjoying it and I keep waiting for it to kick back and for me to be like, "Oh! I could play anything! Now I remember!" Jarring the memory of where all the notes are. And slowly it's coming back. But more importantly, unlike painting, which is so fraught for me, because I want to do such a good job I worry about it so much, piano is just like, "Yeah...whatever, this is sort of fun." So that's the only new thing. Other than that I'm doing some traveling, doing some events. Jacques Pepin is turning 90 on Dec. 18 and the Jacques Pepin Foundation, his daughter and son-in-law have been promoting "90/90", which is 90 dinners in honor of Jacques to raise money for the foundation.
