

BLACK AND JEWISH AMERICA

AN INTERWOVEN HISTORY

HOSTED BY EMMY®-WINNING
HENRY LOUIS GATES, JR.

This month, KLCS Public Media premieres a seminal documentary series, Black and Jewish America: An Interwoven History, hosted by the preeminent scholar Dr. Henry Louis Gates, Jr. In the grand, often painful narrative of the American experiment, few relationships are as historically resonant, creatively prolific, and politically complex as that between Black and Jewish Americans – forged in shared struggle, tested by division, and representing a uniquely American experience. This alliance has profoundly shaped the nation's culture and conscience. Dr. Gates masterfully chronicles this complex bond with his signature depth and clarity, guiding viewers through a four-part journey that is both unflinching and ultimately hopeful.

The series begins by tracing fundamentally different starting points, yet reveals how entrenched racism and rising antisemitism of the early 20th century drew these communities into a powerful, pragmatic civic partnership. This foundation set the stage for Episode 2, which spotlights the collaborations that reshaped American popular culture itself. From the jazz clubs and Broadway stages to Hollywood studios, Black and Jewish artists forged a creative synergy that defined music and film. The relationship between these communities deepened after World War II, when the atrocities of the Holocaust came to light, reinforcing a sense of common struggle as both communities grappled with the devastating consequences of hatred and intolerance.

The zenith of this political partnership, the civil rights era's "Grand Alliance," forms the heart of Episode 3. Here, Gates examines the transformative interracial coalition that fought to dismantle Jim Crow, a period often described as the relationship's "golden age." Yet, the series does not shy from the fractures. It traces the imbalances and diverging paths that quickly tested this solidarity as each group turned inward, prioritizing distinct struggles in an increasingly fragmented America. Episode 4 brings the story into the modern era, examining the shifting dynamics from the 1970s onward—political gains, global tensions, and the alarming resurgence of hate crimes that threaten both communities today.

Through conversations with dozens of voices, including Billy Crystal, Tony Kushner, Anna Deavere Smith, Al Sharpton, and David Remnick, Gates weaves a tapestry defined by powerful solidarity and painful division. "Black and Jewish in America" offers more than history; it provides an essential lesson in the difficult, necessary work of coalition-building. At a moment of profound social fragmentation, this series is a compelling reminder of the hope and enduring promise of cross-cultural solidarity against the persistent threats of injustice. It is not merely a look back, but a crucial guidepost for the path forward.

BLACK AND JEWISH AMERICA airs Sundays at 9PM beginning February 15

TABLE FOR ALL with BUKI ELEGBEDE

Television producer and cultural explorer Buki Elegbede returns for a delectable new season of "Table for All," journeying deeper into the heart of America's diverse communities. This year promises his most eclectic cultural buffet yet, proving that around a shared table, conversation and cuisine build powerful connections.

Buki kicks off the season with his new puppy, Rockefeller, exploring the profound bond between humans and canines before honoring educators who use food as a tool for change. The adventures continue as he meets immigrants shaping their new hometowns and discovers how disparate groups build community pride through similar, joyful acts.

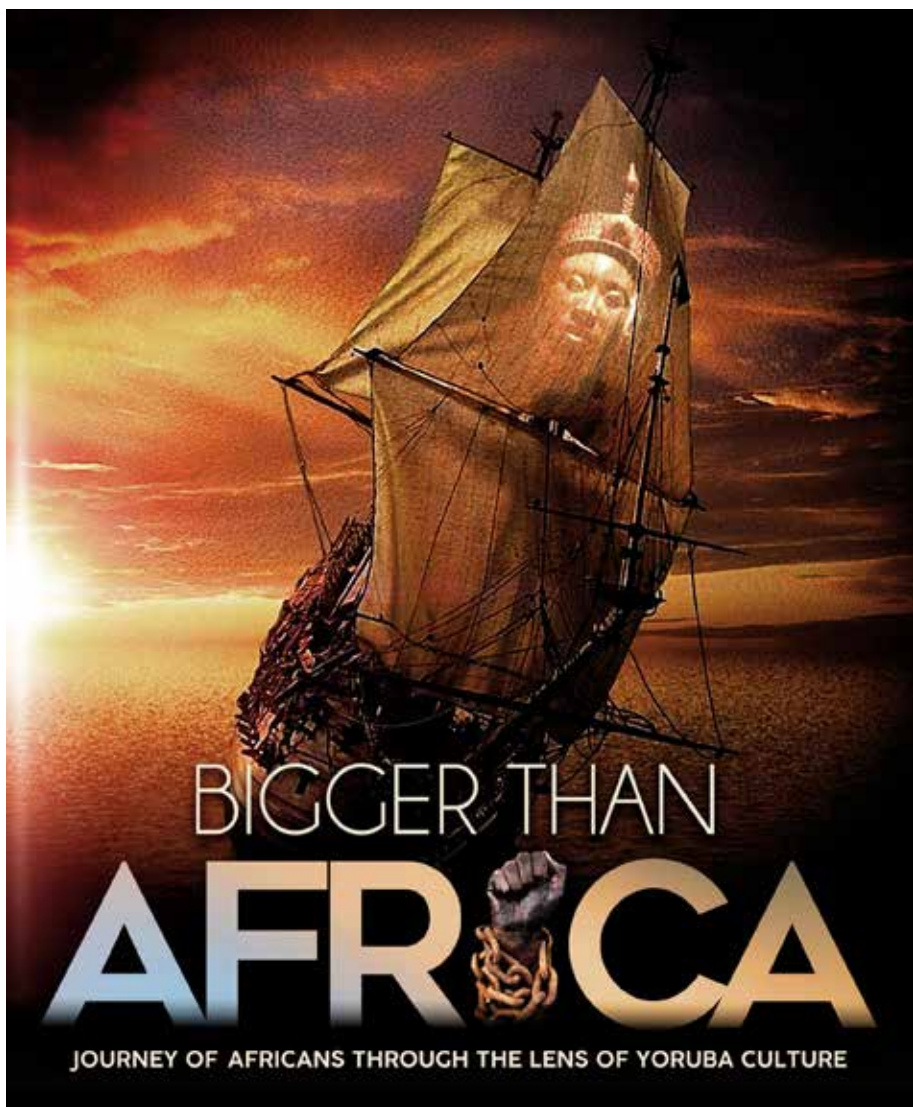

From resilient women helping their communities heal from overseas conflicts to environmental champions protecting local waterways, every story is served with authenticity. A particularly poignant stop finds Buki on "Palestine Way" in Paterson, New Jersey, savoring the flavors and stories of Palestinian-American life.

Join Buki for a season that proves, no matter the topic, there's always room for a fascinating story, a delicious bite, and a new friend. Tune in for an experience that feeds both the soul and the curiosity.

TABLE FOR ALL with BUKI ELEGBEDE airs Saturdays at 1:30PM starting Feb. 7

BIGGER THAN AFRICA

The Atlantic passage of slave ships carried more than bodies; it transported entire civilizations rich with philosophies, religions, languages, rhythms and ancestral memory. The epic documentary BIGGER THAN AFRICA, traces the unbreakable, global heartbeat of Yoruba culture. With research and interviews from around the world, this stunning visual odyssey—shot across six countries—travels from the Candomblé temples of Salvador, Brazil, to the Orisha festivals of Trinidad, Harlem’s drum circles, and back to West Africa.

The film reveals how Yoruba culture not only survived the Middle Passage but flourished, evolving into a powerful, unifying force for the African diaspora. More than a historical account, this is a testament to resilience. Discover the threads that bind continents in a culture that truly became bigger than Africa.

BIGGER THAN AFRICA airs Monday, February 9 at 9PM

MISS SCARLET, Season 6

Miss Eliza Scarlet is doing her best to have it all. Her business is thriving, but her personal life enters new territory as she attempts to follow her heart and develop a relationship with Inspector Alexander Blake. Eliza may be an expert solving crimes, but she's very much a novice when it comes to love. Can Eliza juggle the twin demands of her personal and professional life?

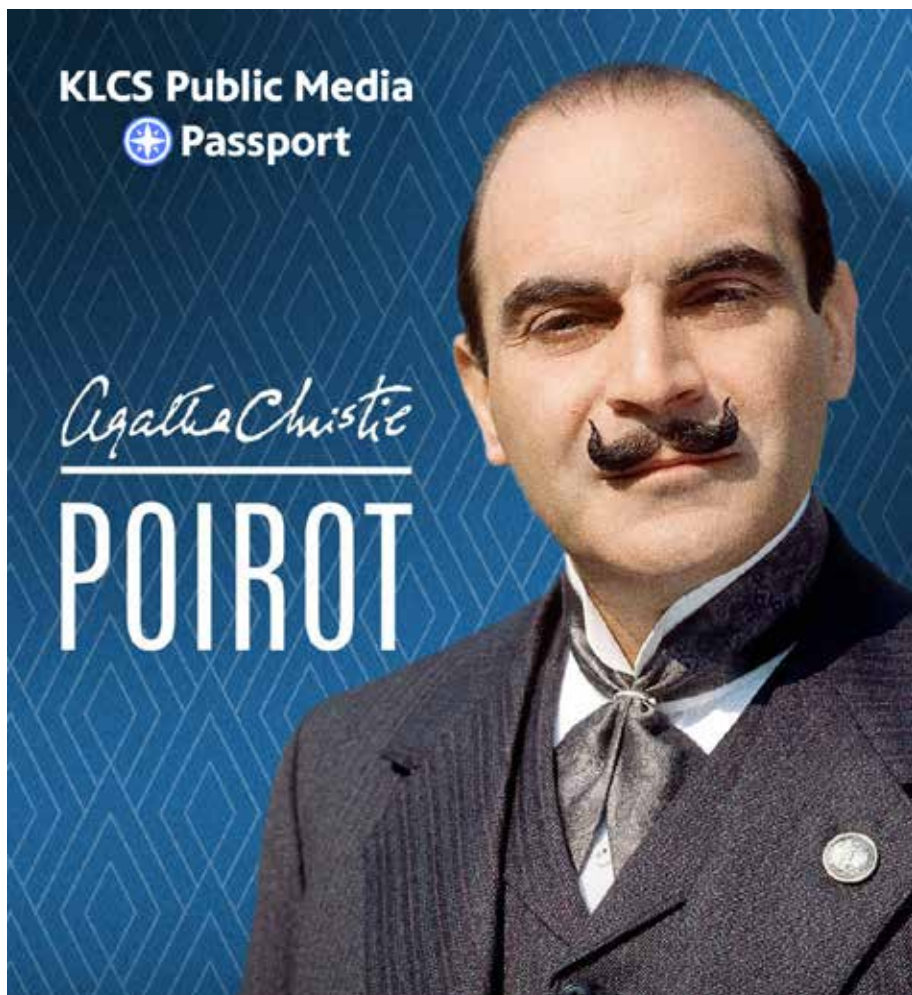

The season launches with "Secrets and Lies," as Blake himself hires Eliza to track a violent psychiatric patient in a chilling murder mystery. High society scandal follows in "Trafalgar Spring," where a divorcing couple's missing racehorse reveals blackmail and murder, offering a dark mirror to Eliza and Blake's own tenuous bond. The detective world expands in "The Delivery," with Moses's return to London sparking a friendly rivalry with Clarence determined to prove he is every bit as good as his predecessor.

Professional tensions reach a peak in "Bad Blood" and "The Night Shift," when a case for a new Detective Inspector pits Eliza directly against Scotland Yard, culminating in a risky jailbreak plot. Finally, Eliza's prestige brings a formidable new ally in "The Line of Duty," as a mysterious ambassador's death forces her to collaborate with the powerful Governess. Can the woman who is so skilled at solving crimes finally solve the puzzle of having it all?

Miss Scarlet, Season 6, airs Wednesdays at 7PM beginning February 11

AGATHA CHRISTIE'S POIROT

For fans of the impeccably trimmed mustache and the relentless "little grey cells," a treasure trove of classic mystery awaits. The complete Agatha Christie's Poirot collection from Masterpiece Mystery!, featuring David Suchet's career-defining portrayal of the detective, is available for on-demand streaming through KLCS|Passport. This remarkable collection comprises the full series, which aired on PBS for 24 years. Adapted from Christie's novels and short stories, the series offers an unprecedented dive into the Art Deco elegance of the 1930's and follows Hercule Poirot as he solves crimes across Europe.

Suchet's meticulously crafted portrayal of the brilliant Belgian detective remains unmatched, capturing every eccentricity and genius. Celebrated for its faithful adaptations, the series transports viewers to the 1930's alongside the loyal Captain Hastings (Hugh Fraser) and the perpetually flummoxed Chief Inspector Japp (Philip Jackson). Relive iconic, top-rated cases that defined a generation of mystery television: the snowbound perfection of "Murder on the Orient Express," the luxurious peril of "Death on the Nile," the chilling alphabetical game of "The ABC Murders," and the masterful, final bow in "Curtain: Poirot's Last Case." Every binge-worthy clue, quirk, and brilliant deduction is a click-away.

Agatha Christie's Poirot is available on-demand for members on KLCS|Passport

AFRO-LATINO TRAVELS WITH KIM HAAS

Journey beyond the postcard-perfect vistas to the very soul of Latin America with Afro-Latino Travels with Kim Haas. This groundbreaking public media series, hosted by trilingual executive producer Kim Haas, is the first to dedicate its lens solely to the vibrant cultures, profound history, and indelible contributions of Latin Americans of African descent across the region.

From the rhythmic heart of Colombia to the sun-drenched coasts of Costa Rica, Kim serves as your guide into worlds rarely seen on mainstream travel shows. In San José, she shares dinner with the family of Costa Rica's first Black vice president and meets a literary icon who gave voice to the Afro-Costa Rican experience. Later, in Limón, the story of Jamaican railroad workers comes alive, followed by a flavorful cooking lesson in a beloved local kitchen.

In Cali, Colombia, Kim joins-in the massive Petronio Alvarez music festival, gets a salsa lesson, and savors local cuisine. Along the Pacific Coast, she traces a history of resilience and ventures deep into a biodiverse jungle paradise. Tune-in for a series that doesn't just visit places—it connects with the people, stories, and enduring spirit that shape the Americas.

Afro-Latino Travels with Kim Haas airs Saturdays at 6:30PM beginning Feb. 14

FEELING GOOD ABOUT AMERICA

FEELING GOOD ABOUT AMERICA: THE 1976 PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION chronicles the story of the 1976 presidential election where then-former California Governor Ronald Reagan, little known Georgia Governor Jimmy Carter and incumbent President Gerald Ford battled for our nation's highest office. Learn how Reagan took his fight for the Republican nomination all the way to the convention, and how Georgia Governor Jimmy Carter, who stepped onto the national stage touting his outsider status and promising, "I'll never lie to you.", charmed America, courting the rock 'n' roll vote and playing off his Southern heritage.

Through a combination of archival clips and interviews, the film examines this close race and discusses how the 1976 Presidential election could be the last time the country's political landscape was not as polarized as it seems today. Featured interviews include: historian and author Douglas Brinkley; political analyst Larry J. Sabato; journalist and political commentator Fred Barnes; Carter's National Security Advisor, Zbigniew Brzezinski; Walter Mondale, and President Ford's son, Jack Ford.

FEELING GOOD ABOUT AMERICA airs Monday, February 16, at 9PM

SAMANTHA BROWN PLACES TO LOVE SEASON 9

Samantha Brown's Places to Love returns for a beautifully crafted season that celebrates the people, history, and flavors that make a destination truly unforgettable. Across ten immersive half-hour episodes, Samantha provides her signature expertise, focusing on meaningful connection over mere sightseeing.

The journey is both epic and intimate. Traverse iconic Route 66, from the neon of Tucumcari to the storied cafes of Gallup, and from the majesty of the Petrified Forest to the Pacific waves at Santa Monica Pier. Delve into layered history in Williamsburg, Virginia, exploring Jamestown, witnessing a powerful naturalization ceremony at Yorktown, and savoring modern Punjabi flavors alongside colonial narratives.

In a two-part Italian sojourn, discover the scholarly porticos and legendary cuisine of Bologna, then explore the passions of Modena—from aged Parmigiano Reggiano and historic balsamic vinegar to the roaring engines of Ferrari. The season culminates in a global Food Special that includes sampling Berlin's currywurst, New Orleans' coffee, and Michigan's cherry ice wine.

Samantha Brown's Places to Love airs Saturdays at 6PM beginning Feb. 21

KLCS INTERVIEW SPOTLIGHT

Amidst the clamor of peak television, a serene PBS series has found its audience, inviting viewers on a global journey from the comfort of their living rooms to the artisan workshops of England, France, Mexico, Italy, Ireland, and more.

Made with Love is more than a travelogue; it's a heartfelt homage to the craftspeople behind handmade hats, globes, cheese, clothing, and more. Its quiet power has not only captivated viewers but has also sparked tangible support, inspiring organized tours to the very artisans featured on the series. Producer Patrick Green spoke with KLCS to trace the journey of this pandemic-born project, exploring how it tapped into a deep desire to connect with and sustain global craftsmanship—and to reveal what's coming next.

Patrick, how did Made with Love come about?

PG: It was actually a Covid project. I live in Washington D.C., we have two young girls, school shut down, we have no family here. My wife's from Italy, I'm from Vancouver, Canada. So we were stuck without help. We were lucky enough to travel to Italy for Covid, because schools were still open and we had a lot of family support there. So we lived there for a year. I'm a producer/director for television and while I was there, I saw these artisans really suffering from their stores closing, lack of tourists, but was just enamored with their passion, and their love of their craft and also their lineage, like how far back some of these crafts go. I decided to pick up my camera, got a little bored, and I filmed them and had them tell their stories. Then, I put together a pitch package and then sent it to PBS, their headquarters are here, just outside of DC. And they liked it and that was the beginning. It started with Italy, then we've done Ireland, England, France, Portugal, Spain, Mexico, and the U.S. We're doing America 250: Made with Love now, a one-hour special celebrating America's 250th anniversary through the eyes of the artisans who helped found the country. We plan to expand to Japan and maybe some other countries in 2026. The gist of it is it's a celebration of artisans, because I think without them, you really lose the cultures and traditions of those communities. That's what, first and foremost, resonated with me the most; just their passion. They are just lovely people and that do amazing things. That was the genesis of it.

Italy has a lot of artisans, as does England, which I love as an Anglophile. How did you find the featured artists in England?

PG: Whenever we go to a foreign country, we hire local producers and researchers, just to make sure we're staying true to their cultures. So, we hire a local producer, they help us research and we work collaboratively for about three months and narrow them down. We try to find, for example in London, obviously hat culture in London, especially for events. So we found a famous milliner.

What was your road to PBS? You said you live in proximity to their headquarters; you just sent the proposal to them? I've interviewed many people with shows on PBS - funding is always an issue. How was this process for you?

PG: I've been a producer in the D.C. area for 20-plus years, and PBS is here, National Geographic, and Discovery used to be here. So it's kind of a small community and I knew some folks who worked over at the network over at PBS. So I, thankfully, had an open door to go and pitch them, just through my connections. But in terms of funding, they license the content, a portion of it. And we had to fundraise, we have an international distributor who helps fund the rest of it.

With England, you had an extra episode - was it hard to choose the artisans? What were your favorites?

PG: There were a couple artisans that didn't make the main show. My favorite one was, I think, Ian the milliner, probably just as a personality; he's just a lovely guy and really fun to be around. The cheese makers in Cheddar, I didn't even know Cheddar was actually a town in England, so that's where Cheddar was invented, so that was kind of cool. The globe maker; one day I'd love to have one of those globes. It's just a matter of - do I want to put my kids through college, or do I want to get a new globe? (laughs)

What has been your favorite country to feature, so far?

PG: I'd have to say Italy. I say that because my wife's Italian, so I have to say that, right? They have centuries of creativity and knowledge that's passed down, like England. They just have such charisma and it shows in what they make.

What is a typical day now for you like?

PG: Finding stories, finding funding, that's probably 80 percent of my time now. And then, 20 percent is hopefully doing some creative stuff. Managing teams, managing the edit. Funding new stories, like tomorrow we're going to meet with the Australian embassy to see if there's any way to produce something there. Yeah, really boring, actually; the days in the field are a lot more exciting.

Do you have any future projects you are working on, any for PBS?

PG: Right now, we're working on celebration of America 250, it's through the lens of artisans. That will air next year; we're in post-production on that. We start with the 13 colonies when they converted to states - who are the artisans that helped found the country that are still working today, and in existence today, whether it's a blacksmith, a flag maker, boat makers. That will air in June, 2026. And we're just working with PBS on the next countries, that will be for 2027 - might be Germany, Japan, I think we might be going back to England and Ireland.

Is there anything you want to add for our readers?

PG: The show, it's about preserving - I'm trying to do my small part in preserving their craft by telling their stories and getting it out to a broader audience. And really share how important these artisans are for our communities. After the show aired, a lot of our artisans were contacting me saying they were getting a lot of extra business from Americans, which is phenomenal and is exactly what I was hoping-for, for them. So, that was super exciting. In Italy and Ireland, artisans were contacting me and said people were changing their itineraries. They were overseas from the U.S. and they wanted to go visit them, and spend time with them. That gave me the idea of producing tours. So now, we're doing bespoke artisan tours, where they get to meet the artisans that they've seen in the show. We're working with individual stations on that right now; that's been an exciting development. And the artisans love it because they get 20 people coming into their shop and seeing the work they do, and a lot of times, buy a lot of their stuff (laughs) so that's great! It's going beyond the show.
